

Hemp Listed on USDA's AGRICULTURAL CENSUS

 The 2022 Ag Census has officially recognized hemp as its own category, a huge win for hemp cultivators and industry experts everywhere!

While this recognition unveils the crop's economic importance, it also highlights the thorny path of regulatory hurdles that stifle its potential, particularly for industrial hemp growers. The detailed data now available paves the way for more refined advocacy efforts, aiming to reshape regulations and catalyze growth.

New FinCEN Reporting Mandate Alert!

🔔 Attention Cannabis Entrepreneurs! The new beneficial ownership reporting rule requires entities, especially those formed after January 1, 2024, to disclose their beneficial owners to the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN), aiming to eliminate the secrecy of shell companies. Businesses existing before this date have until January 1, 2025, to comply.

Preparing for Cannabis as Natural Products

The cannabis industry is poised to rightfully claim its spot in the $199 billion natural products sector . Here's what this shift means for cannabis businesses:

1. CGMP Standards: Cannabis companies need to adopt Current Good Manufacturing Practices (CGMP) to ensure high product quality and consumer trust.
2. Prepare for Organic Certification: With federal rescheduling on the horizon, it's crucial for businesses to align their cultivation and production processes with organic standards.
3. Cultivate Cultural Acceptance: Standardized testing and clear communication can help demystify the plant's benefits, fostering greater acceptance and integrating cannabis into the mainstream natural product industry.
